

New Campus mailbox unveiled

The new mailbox is designed to help those who use it a lot. It now incorporates common features that can be found in other email programs. A pilot test has been started to allow the whole of the community to try out the new Campus mailbox.

The new mailbox incorporates a design that is adapted to the Campus 5.0 and a number of improvements, including the ability to open a new window so as to always be able to see the Campus, scheduling of delayed sending, downloading all the contents of a folder as a compressed file, assisted search of users or searches by colours.

The inbox now lets users preview the content of messages received or drag them to any of the folders. An autofill function for previously entered addresses has also been added and contact management optimised. File attachments have been improved and a new autoresponse configuration feature included.

While the new mailbox is still in beta, you will be able to access and view all messages in both the old and new systems, as both will remain operative and interconnected.
